Frank Spadafino serves as Blank Rome's Chief Information Officer. In this role, Frank leads Firm-wide information technology activities and initiatives across all practices and geographies, and works closely with the Firm's leadership, practice groups, technology team, and administrative professionals to help achieve the Firm's strategic objectives.

With 30 years of experience successfully managing all aspects of global information systems, Frank has served as chief information officer and held various technology roles in both the legal and investment banking industries. Drawing from this experience, Frank has developed a broad perspective and deep understanding of the criteria needed to implement an effective information management strategy, successfully execute information systems initiatives that support business goals, and establish an operational framework that delivers outstanding client service in the most efficient and effective means possible.

Frank received his M.B.A. in Information Systems from Baruch College and his B.A. in Economics from the State University of New York at Albany.
