Victoria Ortega has nearly 10 years of experience advising, counseling, and defending business clients in high-stakes disputes in and out of the courtroom across the nation. Her complex corporate litigation practice focuses on issues presented for clients with consumer-facing businesses, such as retail, media, hospitality, and the restaurant business, pharmaceutical sales, medical equipment, and specifically involves those of employment, trade secrets, non-competition agreements, breaches of M&A-related reps and warranties, consumer fraud, advertising, labeling, pricing, and other related issues.

Victoria also practices in the areas of white-collar criminal law and internal investigations. She has notable experience conducting internal and government investigations as well as pre- and post-integration due diligence for multinational companies, specifically advising clients on potential exposure under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, bid-rigging, anti-money laundering, bribery, export controls, and other anti-corruption laws.

Victoria has a reputable track record for successfully defeating threatened and actual claims at every stage of litigation. She has succeeded in bringing early dispositive issues before the courts and saving costs associated with discovery, and is skilled in early and efficient dispute resolution, including mediation.

Victoria is experienced in traditional healthcare regulatory compliance, including fraud and abuse analysis, licensure, and reimbursement advice. She works alongside Blank Rome's government relations professionals and other attorneys to assist clients in developing strategies to address both regulatory compliance requirements as well as public policy issues.

Victoria serves as a trusted adviser, outside counsel, and business partner to many clients who operate consumer-facing businesses. With regard to both mitigation of risk and litigation of claims, Victoria's clients appreciate her genuine interest in the nuances of their businesses and common-sense approach to the most complex business issues.

Victoria devotes her pro bono practice to asylum applicants and has won asylum for five clients from Central America.

Victoria serves on Ayuda's Board of Directors.

Outside The Firm

Victoria has been a voracious reader of fiction since childhood, and her love for stories made her into an attorney who listens with great interest and little judgment. She loves to travel with her husband, Robert—in the last year, they have visited the Republic of Georgia, Southern Turkey, and Oman—and is an ardent appreciator of all things epicurean. She is a strong power napper and home cook, particularly of dishes learned from her Middle-Eastern mom.
